

WikiVoyage is the FREE worldwide travel guide that anyone can edit.

- 1. What to add. Choose a place that you are enthusiastic about and would like to share information about. It should be somewhere you know and have visited, but you don't have to be an expert. Your perspective is valuable to others.
- 2. How to describe it. Decide what type of person would like to visit, and what are the features that would make them want to visit. Don't use I, me, us, or we in the description. Don't hesitate to use you, though, when addressing the reader.
- 3. Find the right article. Wikivoyage articles are named after the geographical location. Select the best article based on where the attraction is. If it is outside of a town, you might have to place it where travellers would normally stay when visiting it.
- 4. Find the right section. See for sights. Do for activities. Eat for restaurants, cafes, and fast food.
- 5. Add your entry. If you aren't familiar with editing a wiki, you can just click "edit" next to an existing listing to edit that entry or click "add listing" next to an appropriate section heading to add a new entry.

A '''World Heritage Site''' is a landmark or area which is selected by the [[ United Nations]] Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization ([[UNESCO]]) as having cultural, historical, scientific or other form of significance, and is legally protected by international treaties. The sites are judged important to the collective interests of humanity.

To be selected, a World Heritage Site must be an already classified landmark, unique in some respect as a geographically and historically identifiable place having special cultural or physical significance (such as an ancient ruin or historical structure, building, city, complex, desert, forest, island, lake, monument, or mountain). It may signify a remarkable accomplishment of humanity, and serve as evidence of our intellectual history on the planet.{{Citation
